

Stephanie has 15 years experience in clinical research. Currently she is the Research Manager at Cancer Trials NZ having been in this post for 3 years since her move to New Zealand from the UK.

She has worked across all phases of clinical trials within the pharmaceutical industry, CROs and academia. Her career has focused on working within academic trials offices in the field of collaborative and investigator driven cancer clinical research. She worked for 10 years at the CTRU, University of Leeds as Assistant Director responsible for breast cancer trials.

Whilst working within clinical research, she obtained a Masters degree in Healthcare Ethics and Law, which reflects her interest in both the legalities and ethical issues surrounding clinical trial activities.